

Dear Hospice Waikato Supporter,
In these unprecedented and unpredictable times palliative care has never been more important.

Winter 2020

Why is Hospice's palliative care more important now than ever?

As we know those who are elderly, frail, and/or with underlying serious illness are most at risk from COVID-19.

Since our Level Four alert was announced, our Community Nurses have been working tirelessly in the community to ensure that patients receive the very best care. We are taking every precaution to keep patients safe and families and caregivers reassured and supported.

There are many things we still don't know with the situation changing daily but sadly one thing we do know is that COVID-19 is having a devastating effect on our ability to raise funds.

Now more than ever we need your help to keep our service available to our patients.

All of our Hospice Shops are closed. Our fundraising events have been cancelled and community fundraising has stopped. Hospice Waikato is forecasting a loss of revenue in excess of $1 million dollars.

As an essential service during this lockdown, our staff and nurses will continue to put themselves at risk by continuing to provide our service to people who are living with a terminal illness. We are very aware that this is a difficult and stressful time for everyone but we need your help. Our need is greater than ever before.

Can you help us? Please remember Hospice through the Covid-19 pandemic.

Life as a Rainbow Place Nurse

An inside look into being a paediatric nurse within a Hospice setting with Zoe Fairbrother, our Rainbow Place Team Leader Nurse.

What made you decide to work in palliative care?

It was curiosity for me. When I was a student nurse, I was looking after a child in Hospital and the family told me about the care and support they were receiving from the local Hospice. I was curious and rang about a placement opportunity to see what it was all about.

What are the main differences between adult and children's respite care?

Both services are unique. However, for children's respite it's about providing a much-needed break from time to time for parents and caregivers who are looking after a terminally ill child, which often needs to be more frequent than our adult respite.

Our children's respite is often centred around play and fun rather than rest for the patient, but symptom management is also a part of it. Respite here is more about a regular sleep over for children at Hospice with competent and trustworthy carers providing reassurance for families to try and switch off from the 24/7 care required for their child.

What are some of the highlights and challenges you see on a daily basis?

We often see families who are feeling frustrated and isolated about not being able to change things for their child and sometimes just being a person they can talk to, helps. When families start to talk and share their journeys with you, especially when they start to trust you, to care for their child, you feel like you will then be able to make a difference for them along their journey.

A positive aspect of this job is watching children interact and play together at the parent/carers group while the parents get to unload and chat over a well-deserved coffee. I love seeing the healthcare assistants and nurses interactions with the children who stay at Hospice, especially hearing about how much they are getting to know the child.

Do you find it difficult to work in an end of life service?

It's an absolute honour and privilege to spend time with our Rainbow Place children and families on their journeys, learning all about the children's little quirks along the way. Therefore, being able to be there for their end of life care is also an honour. I work together with the family/friends and professionals involved to ensure the patient's wishes are being heard and the care/supporting being provided is the best possible care. Each family's journey is so unique and if you feel like you have made a difference to that family, on their journey, you have had a good day, that said, just being there and listening to families' pain and hopes is sometimes enough.

What's one piece of advice you have for families entering our service?

Take the time to get to know the team members, they want to get to know you and your family and WILL always care about you and will always be trying to find new ways of supporting you.
